Redvers Hometown History project recognizes community builders

LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

What started as a simple update to some faded signage in Redvers has grown into a historical project in tribute to community builders. For many years, residents and visitors enjoyed the familiar Pride of Redvers signs, which featured local athletes Dean Kennedy and Danielle Kot—similar to many signs found throughout Saskatchewan that boast being the hometown of

"They were put up a few decades ago, and they were really showing their age; They were sun faded and cracked," explained Jena Cowan, Assistant CAO with the Town of Redvers.

Prior to a recent sportsman din-ner featuring Kennedy as one of the special guests, it was time to spruce up the old signage. "We didn't want him to come to

"We didn't want him to come to our community and see his sign in that shape," Cowan explained. "Dallas Jonassen—who heads up the Redvers Rockets Field of Dreams, which gives out a lot of grants to our community—paid for both signs to be redone in full and they were."

The project was completed just in time for Kennedy's return to Redvers, and the idea of Hometown History was born.

"The idea actually started as making mini versions of that sign—which we do have one right now—but we had that sign—which we do have one right now—but we had a sponsor (Bill and Jan Murray) come in this past spring, asking if he could pay to put up three new signs and he wanted them to be highway signs," Cowan said.

The town thought it was a great idea and three people were nominated to be featured on the signs. Those initial three recognized for their contributions to Redvers were Jim Lewthwaite, Christian T. Sutter, and Howard Wright.

After all the background work of gathering informa-tion, speaking with the families of those nominated, and navigating the logistics of actually creating the signage, the big moment came to officially unveil the tributes over the Homecoming Weekend (June 29-July 1). "We've had such support," said Cowan of Hometow Histor." (Starting of this preject and the first year like year the idea blossomed into reframing how Redvers marks the annual holiday.

"When we were planning it, it was very Canada Day specific and as it evolved, our admin assistant here in the office suggested calling it a homecoming because our surrounding communities Carnduff and Alida have had very successful homecoming events," explained Cowan. "Let's call it a homecoming, let's not call it Canada Day, and we're going to make it a little bit of everything and include our Hometown History, Canada Day, but also just an event in general for our residents to enjoy—and we're an event in general for our residents to enjoy—and we're going to have it annually!"

The grand idea really paid off for Redvers as the town was absolutely packed with people enjoying the benefits from all that hard work.

Our campground was full and we estimate maybe 500 to 600 people were on the grounds each day," Cowan said.

Mini signs still ongoing

The original idea of the mini signs around Redvers is still being pursued, and will continue on an annual basis. Nominations were held at the beginning of 2024 for the first sign, where any residents can nominate a resident present or past, in categories of Athletic Achievement and Community Impact.

"The Community Impact category has actually been quite popular, because not everyone's an athlete," Cowan said. "Usually, these signs are dedicated to athletes, like our first two are athletes, but all the remainder are Community Impact category, and they seem to resonate with people a lot more.

The first Hometown History mini sign has recently been installed in the community, honouring a man synonymous with healthcare in Redvers for many years.

"Kim Carlsen was nominated for our Hometown His-

"Kim Carlsen was nominated for our Hometown History mini signs, so we actually just got that made and installed," Cowan said. "He was an instrumental member and has been on the Health Care Foundation for decades. He oversaw the building of the new Long Term Care wing and closures and openings. He was nominated and got a sign, it's actually going to be placed by the emergency doors at our health centre."

The nomination form putting Carlsen's name forward touched on some of the highlights over 30 years of involvement with the local health centre. Carlsen was a member of the Redvers Union Hospital Board until it disbanded in 1993, and has continued to be a member of the Redvers and District Health Foundation.

Carlsen played a major role in the new health centre in Redvers, firstly as an original member of the fundraising committee formed in 1994.

"He was an integral part of not only raising the money for the new health centre, but also helped oversee the construction," noted Derek Soroka in Carlsen's nomina-

Construction on the new health centre began in 1996 with the loan paid off 20 years later

"In 2010, Kim played a large part in securing funding from the Saskatchewan government to construct a new 32-bed Long Term Care facility to the Health Centre to replace the aging Haven," Soroka continued. "Kim has played a vital role for the community of Redvers in his role on the hospital board. He has contributed countless hours sitting in meetings, fundraising, organizing fundraising events, which have contributed to the building of a new health centre, and long term care facility, and saw the process through until both loans were paid

Carlsen's sign will be the first of hopefully many around Redvers as the town plans to install one mini sign every year.

"Every year, we're hoping to put up out of our budget, at least one," Cowan said. "And then it's also open to be sponsored."

open to be sponsored."

This allows residents to nominate people they believe ought to be honoured with such a lasting legacy.

"If that's all we do is one per year, we're happy with that," Cowan said. "It'll eventually grow and become a sight to see. But we really wanted to save that day."

wanted to have that draw."

The mini sign project seems to be a combination of attraction, promotion, and something special to enhance the town.

"A little bit of a draw, a little bit of beautification, and a little bit of remembering our history and making sure that our residents who have contributed so much are recognized," summarized Cowan.

The first three honoured

So who exactly were these three men that inspired installing large signs to inspire future generations? Generally, these pioneers helped shape agriculture in Saskatchewan, paving the way for farmers of

Although injured from the event, Sutter went on to fly eight more missions

Returning home to Redvers, Sutter began establishing a family farm—the well-known Aqua Hollow Hereford Ranch. Community was a forefront passion, with Sutter serving on various boards receiving the Saskatchewan Order of Merit in 1988.

Trotz and the Predators go on spending 'frenzy'

The Sports Network calls July 1 'Free Agent Frenzy' and the label definitely applied this year as about $1 billion in contracts were finalized with National Hockey and the label definitely applied this year as about $1 billion in contracts were finalized with National Hockey League players who officially became free agents when their contracts expired at midnight, June 30.

And the biggest spenders of all were the Nashville Predators, whose new general manager, Barry Trotz, grew up in Dauphin, Man., so he knows the value of a good plate of perogies, the best kielbasa and a centreman with 16 years' NHL experience and 555 goals.

That would be Steven Stamkos, the most prominent name to switch teams during Free Agent Frenzy, coming to terms with Nashville for four years and $32 million. Stamkos was the No. 1 overall draft pick in 2008 by the Tampa Bay Lightning after scoring 100 goals in two seasons with Sarnia Sting, and the Toronto native kept up the goal-scoring pace when he joined Tampa Bay, scoring 23 goals as a rookie and putting up seven 40-plus goal seasons, including a 60-goal campaign in 2011-12.

But if Stamkos was the main course for Trotz and the financial gurus who run the show in Nashville, the appetizers weren't too bad, either. Jonathan Marchessault, who had six 25-plus goal seasons with Vegas Golden Knights and won the Conn Smythe trophy in 2023 when he led Vegas to the Stanley Cup, signed on with the Predators for five years and $27.5 million. And defenceman Brady Skjei, formerly of Carolina, signed a sevenyear contract for $49 million. year contract for $49 million.

It's obvious Trotz wants his team to make a run at the Stanley Cup next year. One of the league's best goalies, Juuse Saris, is a Predator, and he signed a contract extension covering the next eight years, for $61 million. One of the NHL's best defencemen, Roman Josi, is under contract, and the Preds' offence was more than respectable to begin with, thanks to the likes of Filip Forsberg, Ryan O'Reilly, Tommy Novak and Gustav Nyquist. Adding Stamkos and Marchessault to that lineup almost guarantees a huge increase in firepower.

"It's a statement, I think, for the rest of the league," Trotz told the Nashville Tennessean. "That these players will come to Nashville. These players see what we're do-will come to Nashville. These players see what we're doing with our franchise. We have lots to offer, and we're very determined to win."

While the Press made a huge free agent splash, a number of other teams made statements, too. The Leafs, for instance, bolstered their blueline with the signings of Chris Tanev and Oliver Ekman-Larsen. Edmonton added high-scoring Viktor Arvidsson and Jeff Skinner. Tampa Bay backfilled the loss of Stamkos by signing Jake Guentzel. Jake DeBrusk moved from Boston to Vancou-

But the Predators made the biggest splash of all and, basically, Trotz's future employment depends on the success of the newest team members. In all, the Predators spent $111 million on free agents and extensions and while that might not necessarily buy a Stanley Cup, it would certainly pay for a lot of kielbasa.

South East Cornerstone School Division

Ongoing financial snapshot fielded by SECPSD board members

Marilyn Yurkiw, manager of finance and payroll for the South East Cornerstone Public School Division, gave board members a quick but comprehensive look at the ongoing financial picture for the division during the board's June 19 meeting in Weyburn.

Yurkiw focused their attention on the statement of operation variances in the various sectors, noting there were some significant differences in some areas and minor adjustments in others nor adjustments in others.

For instance, on the governance (board) side she said the projections are for a figure to come in that will be just under $11,500 from budget while on the adminis-tration side, there will be another under budget number of $54,663, which bodes well for the division, financially speaking.

On the larger instructional department she said teacher salaries are expected to be under budget by a significant $943,220 mainly due to unpaid strike days during recent negotiation periods with the provincial government and the Saskatchewan Teachers' Federa-

Educational Assistant salaries are also expected to be $235,000 below budget based on current staffing levels while instructional aides costs will be over budget by more than $603,000.

more than $603,000.

"This reflects the technology items that were under the capitalization threshold in the budget but are expensed here," she explained. "Because these items aren't capitalized, the amortization is expected to be $125,435 below budget."

Taken in total, on the instruction spectrum, the final expectation is that they will be under budget by just under $743,000

Plant operations are expected to be just about $200,000 under budget while amortization in the transportation section is projected to be $219,000 over budget due to a larger number of buses being purchased. Total transportation costs though could be more than $465,000 lower than budget due.

Complementary services will be about $8,000 over budget and although there were no exacting numbers available at this point, Yurkiw suggested that external services such as school cafeterias and teacherages as well as program designer positions may end up being over budget.

So far, Cornerstone has received just over $80.4 million of anticipated revenue that is just under 70 per cent of the budgeted expectation. Total expenses amount to $85.75 million, or 75 per cent of the budget.

Yurkiw ended the presentation by noting that "Currently we are also projecting variances from budget in several expense categories with the new adjustment to expenses being $1,365,090 below budget."

OBITUARIES

GORDON NEIL GRANT OCTOBER 21, 1950 -IUNE 30, 2024 Gordon Grant of Moosomin, Saskatchewan passed away suddenly at his home in Moosomin on Sunday, June 30, 2024 at the age of 73.

Gord was born in Virden to parents Neil and Betty Grant. He started life on the farm in Miniota, Manitoba, then moved to a farm in Arawana district near Kola in 1957.

Gord left home at the age of 16 to work locally before eventually joining the CP Rail steel gang in B.C.
In 1973 he began farming and married Claudia

Canart in 1974. Between 1977-1981 they happily welcomed three sons into the family. In 1983 they left the family farm and headed to Boston Bar, B.C. where Gord once again joined CP Rail—first as a mechanic, shop supervisor and then Field Maintenance Supervisor. After benance Supervisor. After be-ing transferred to locations including Port Coquitlam, Calgary (Okotoks), and fi-nally to Revelstoke, Gord retired from CP, and Gord and Claudia moved back to the prairies, settling in Moosomin.
No matter where they hung their hats, Gord's heart was always on the farm. He enjoyed spending time "touring" the country, looking at the crops and watching for wildlife. He had an amazing memory for places he visited and people he met throughout his life.

Gord enjoyed nothing more than a good visit with family and friends. With Gord, no one was a stranger, they were just someone he hadn't met yet. He was always willing to lend a hand and help someone in need.

Gord had been an active member of the Sas-katchewan and National Alzheimer's societies and worked hard to reduce the stigma surrounding the disease.

Gord enjoyed spending time with his family, espe-cially his grandchildren. Papa taught them to drive the gravel roads, shoot 22's, fish, and each learned that they would be loved no matter what. He enjoyed many family trips to the north for fishing, sledding and hunting. Gord was the beloved husband of Claudia; lovnusband of Claudia; lov-ing father to Greg (Dani-elle), Terry (Jen), and Ken (Minda); and loving papa to Dalton, Stuart, Kelston, Kezia, Cara, Graham, Gwen, Cypress, and Har-

Non-politicized Crowns doing well

With so much else going on in Saskatchewan politics, it doesn't seem as if much attention is being paid to our publicly owned utility Crown Corporations.

Perhaps that's a good thing.

After all, it can be argued that there has always been far too much noisy politics swirling around our Crown corporations.

It's also surprising, because governments do love to toot their own horns, but there actually was surprisingly little about how well the Crown corporations did in 2023-24.

SaskPower saw a $184-million profit due to what Crown Investments Corp. (CIC) to what Crown Investments Corp. (CIC) Minister Dustin Duncan attributed to "increased sales revenue and decreased fuel costs." This was almost a complete turnaround from the $172-million loss in 2022-

Of course, our mounting power bills mean some are asking why more isn't being returned to the hard-done-by consumers. After all, the benefit of a publicly owned utility is that it's supposedly there to keep costs lower than a for-profit private supplier. But SaskPower also must function as a business and, as such, is investing $1.2-bil-lion in capital projects to "sustain, grow and modernize the provincial electricity system." It also forked over $18 million in dividends to general revenue spending for roads, schools and hospitals.

Of course, nothing done by government these days is completely void of politics—especially in the form of fed-bashing.

"We are going to see increases related to the ongoing carbon tax," said Duncan, who added that rate hikes will also be needed in response to capital expenditures, adding Seektrickyman needs more representations. Saskatchewan needs more power generat-ing capabilities but federal Clean Energy Regulations are now "unachievable, unaffordable and unconstitutional."

But there seemed less politics than there has been at other government announcements.

Besides, have our Crowns ever been devoid of politics? Not really.
Those old enough to remember the years of the Allan Blakeney NDP government will remember the movie theatre ads for the "family of Crown Corporations" and the controversy over public ownerships of oil and potash resource Crowns and the issue of so-called "nationalization."

Murray Mandryk

That produced the privatization of those resource Crowns in the 1980s and the attempted privatization of utilities Crowns thwarted by the then NDP opposition under Roy Romanow.

For years after, as the Saskatchewan Party was getting its footing, the entire political debate in this province centred around fears anyone other than an NDP government would privatize the remaining utility Crowns.

Well, the Sask Party has so far shown no real interest in doing so. And judging by other 2023-24 results, it appears to be a good thing they didn't.

For example, SaskEnergy, at the centre of privatization politics 30 years ago and still at the centre of carbon tax politics today, posted a $55-million profit. That's down, compared with $126 million last year, but compared with $126 million last year, but enough to provide a $21-million dividend to the taxpayers in the past five years.

Sask Iel—the only remaining publicly owned telephone utility in the country—posted net income of $95.4 million on operating revenues of $1.3 billion. That's $21.3 million more than the previous year. It paid a $38.2 million dividend.

a $58.2 million dividend.

And Saskatchewan Government Insurance (SGI) posted $78.1 million in net income while Sask residents continue to pay some of the lowest auto insurance rates in the county. "SGI's financial results benefit-ted from a mild storm season, along with a better-than-expected performance by its investment portfolio," according to a gov-ernment news release. Last year, SGI's Auto Fund witnessed $1.096 billion in total claims Fund witnessed $1.096 billion in total claims and wrote $1.078 billion in gross premiums. Of course, there is still a bit of politics swirling around today's Saskatchewan Crown Coroporations. And there are even more complaints. They aren't perfect. But they have withstood decades of politics and continue to provide a vital service to the people of the province.

On June 26, 2024, members and former members of the Pipestone Branch of the Saskatchewan Genealogical Society met for their annual potluck barbecue.

The Pipestone Branch of the Saskatchewan Genealogical Society is based in Moosomin and meets regularly at the Moosomin Public Library Branch, Southeast Regional Library, every third Wednesday of the month in the after-noon, at 2 pm, except June, July, August and December.

This year they celebrated the 30th anniversary of the club by inviting former members to join the barbecue. Thirty years of fellowship and helping people who need help finding their ancestors!

This was a special occasion as member Gerry Adair, UE, received a Heritage Award for Volunteering from the Saskatchewan Genealogical Society. Gerry is a United Empire Loyalist, belonging to both the Provincial and National Branches of the United Empire Loyalists. He is very knowledgeable on the subject and spends many hours helping others to prove their descendance from someone who fought in the American Revolution.
