Sets new record at Iron Legs Mountain Race Jones wins 100km race with a time of 12:15:11

BY ASHLEY BOCHEK

Austin Jones of Wapella is a marathon runner and has recently broken the Iron Legs Marathon race record. Jones won the 100 km race on August 17 in Calgary. The World-Spectator interviewed him on his latest win:

Tell me a bit about yourself.

I was born in Brandon and I grew up in Wapella. All of my family is still there so I still go home quite a bit. Then, I moved to Calgary eight years ago. I am a plumber in Calgary.

Calgary. I didn't get into running until the pandemic. Basketball was my first sport I really liked which I played a lot of growing up in Wapella and Moosomin. I started running during the pandemic because there was nothing really to do and I wanted to stay active and then I fell in love with it

Why do you think you fell in love with running? What about it makes you love it?

I think for me you get out what you put in for the most part with running. If you put the time and effort in, you will improve. There isn't a whole lot of skill to running it is more just putting in the time which I really like that mindset.

What sort of training do you do for running mara- ultra-marathon. thons?

I really like trail running or mountain running. In Cal-ary we are about an hour from the Canadian Rockies so gary we are about an roun normal sector that is where I really love running. For training, I usually go to the gym once or twice a week to build some leg strength, but the bulk of training is just running. I live in the city, and there are some trails by my house that I try and run there and then run on the pavement. On the weekends, I try and get out to the mountains and do

A weekly training split would be probably I usually run about six days a week anywhere from 100 kms to 150 kms a week for training. Mostly what I like doing is running out in the moun-tains, so I usually try and run those kilometers in the mountains where there is lots of ups and downs and you're running up and over running passes. I pretty much just run.

How many marathons have you run?

I did my first at the Calgary marathon in 2022, which is a road marathon done in the city and that is 42.2 kms. I have done a few ultra-marathons—they are called—so anything over the 42 kms that a marathon is is called an

I have done two 50 km races where one was near Swift Current and I did another this year in Vernon.

Then I did a 50 miler last summer in Crowsnest which is 80 kms. Then, I did Iron Legs this summer which was 100 kms.

I understand you set a new record at the Iron Legs marathon. How did that feel?

It was pretty good. The day went pretty much as well as it could have there was no major issues and I trained pretty consistently all year, so it was nice to see that all pay off.

Those trails are pretty close to my house so it was kind of like my home trail, so it was nice to put down a good effort out there.

Why do you participate in marathons? What about them do you like? _____The longer distances. I am not really sure to be honest.

There is a mental part that I am drawn to and I am also not the fastest so the longer the races go the more chance you have of doing well when you're not the fastest runner because there are so many other things that you need to take care of.

 Continued from page 21 When you are running that long, eat-ing and hydrating are so important. Tak-ing care of yourself is a huge thing. That is probably what I am drawn to, all of the other pieces of the puzzle. It isn't neces-sarily the running, you have to be on your food and nutrition and I just love spend-ing big days out in the mountains.

What are some of the challenges when

What are some of the challenges when running a marathon? If you're new to running, running is a really repetitive sport so it can be really hard and easy to get over-use injuries. The stick-to-intess is a challenge I would say because it can be very repetitive which some people may not like. The biggest thing—if you want to start running—is to very slowly build up your runs because if you do too much too fast you can injure your joints just from all the pounding.

pounding. Running is very hard on your joints. I think it is pretty crucial to eat and work your way up in distance.

You sound like you have learned a lot about running and the effects it has on your body. How did you learn about it? Mostly through trial and error and the internet. For the last year or two I have met some other people that are into run-ning ultras and they have taught me some things

They have been through it and have the knowledge as well, just friends and stuff like that.

What do you have ahead to look forward to in terms of marathons? Nothing right now. I might look into some races next summer, but as of right now I have got nothing planned.

What are your goals in the future for running marathons? Is there anywhere you would like to go and run a marathon? I would like to continue to have fun with it and getting out running in the mountains. Someday I would maybe like to do a 100 mile race so 160 kms, but nothing planned just something I would possibly be inter-ested in, in the future.

We're so blessed here with the Canadian Rockies, there are so many beautiful peaks out there, but if I had to pick a race I would be interested in, there is the Utah called the Trushar Mountain Run that I have kind of looked at that would be really cool. There are some really big ultras in the States like Western States is out in Cali-fornia and it is a really historic race and I just recently got home from France with my wife and where we were there is a big ultra called UTMB. I don't have a ton of interest in running it, but it would be cool to go see the event for sure.

How many more years do you see your-

As long as I am enjoying running I will continue running it so I hope there are still quite a few years left, but the main thing is as long as I am enjoying it then I will probably keep running.

McNaughton High School Home Ec Renovation under way

The renovation project at McNaughton High School's Home Ec Lab is well under away, with cabinets being installed. The costs of the renovation are being covered by the Southeast Cornerstone School Division, but McNaughton High School approached the community to cover the cost of upgrades such as new appliances and equipment, and stainless steel upgrades. When the school administration presented at a Chamber of Commerce meeting in the spring, $17,500 was donated to the project at that meeting. Total fundraising now stands at $25,420. The project should be complete by the end of October.

South East Cornerstone School Division

Presentation given on special projects that help students earn extra credits

EY NORM PARK A little initiative, a little encouragement, a little assis-tance, a little determination and voila, you have the mak-ings of a popular Grade A Special Projects environment within the South East Cornerstone Public School Division. Things like this just don't happen, but a couple of edu-cators/administrators who help make it happen, were in the SECPSD board room in Weyburn on September 18 to illustrate what can happen when initiative, imagination and will power meld into projects that help high school students gain additional credits. The two administrators, Nicole Blackburn from Weyburn Comprehensive School (WCS) and Sarah Purves from the Oxbow Prairie Horizons School (both vice principals) were

The presentation was part of the board's first open busi-ness session in the new academic year with the members addressing Cornerstone's System Goal #1 that states, "our students have opportunities to learn and succeed in every acheal". school.

Keith Keating, the division's director of education troduced the topic by noting how the public schools in the southeast "strive to ensure every student, regardless of school, grade, diverse situation, or instructional delivery without, has every opportunity to learn and succeed." He said that professional growth to support student learning will be enhanced through the Witsby platform which will be implemented this academic year. Professional development will be advanced and delivered to support student assessment. Schools will also work with the Indigenous Education Responsibility Framework, and ensure schools have "understandings of trauma informed practices." Keating listed the various support professionals with-in the division such as career development counsellors, speech language pathologists, community education liai-sons, intervention teachers and instructional coaches.

He also reported on how SECPSD has maintained a high graduation success rate for both non-Indigenous and First Nations students compared with provincial results. Blackburn was first up to provide a video presentation on special project opportunities that some WCS students are developing to earn credits as an alternate pathway to a successful completion of grades. successful completion of grades ... starting with Grade 10 candidates.

birthday! (Her actual birth date is September 21.) Jordan and Analyn Trinidad and their family, Dana, Jamir and Ahreeyah, travelled to the Philippines in Au-gust. It had been eight years since they had been home. It was Ahreeyah's first time there. The trip took 18 hours by plane and then a seven-hour land trip. The kids were excited to visit with their relatives. While there they visited Baguio City, beach resorts and spring resorts. They needed more time there but after four weeks they needed to come home as school was starting. During the summer, Wawota bid goodbye to the fol-lowing persons: Eileen Shatford who moved to the Villa and Joyce Glenn who moved to Regina to live with her son Kurt Gleisinger. Wawota has also welcomed several newcomers: Michel-Jean and Carolyn Cardinal from B.C. who have purchased Joyce Glenn's home on Anne St., Paul and Roberta (Bobbi) Oosterhoff from Okotoks, Alberta, who have purchased Eileen Shatford's home on Third St. and Trae Gasnarek who has purchased the house belonging to Ed Young on Thatcher Ave. Welcome to all of these new residents and we hope you enjoy our friendly community

The Wawota Parkland School held their annual awards ceremony on Friday, September 20. Awards were given out for academics and athletics. There were Teacher Recognition Awards for Grades 7-11, Academic Awards for Grade 10 and 11, Subject Awards for all subjects and Grades 7-11, Green Zone Awards for Grade 7-9, Honour Roll for Grade 10-11, Haunted Hotel Award, and Sports Award for Cross Country, Volleyball, Badminton, Golf, Track and Field and Curling, as well as Most Dedicated Athlete and Athlete of the Year Awards. lenging, but worth the time and effort. This year WCS students had 13 projects submitted with 11 being completed, compared with five projects in the pre-vious school year. There was an 86 per cent completion rate. To illustrate the successful ventures students may embark on, Blackburn introduced Calla, the WCS student who has pursued credits in the challenging field of power lift-ing, something she said she has pursued for a few years. The Grade 12 student said the sport has helped her meet challenges such as mental health and nutrition concerns as managing a rigorous schedule. Her dedication has well as given her the opportunity to compete in world-wide com-petitions. This year the competition was in Malta, where she finished fifth in her weight class and qualified for next year's in Costa Rica. She explained her favourite lift is the squat squat. Calla's flawless presentation gave board members an in-dication of what students can accomplish for credits with-out having to be within a structured school environment. Purves was up next, talking about apprenticeship credits. This is also an area of pursuit that is generally done outside the structured school system. Purves said students must pursue the credits under the uncarrient of a credit dial comparements of a comparement.

Keating said the rural counsellors play a meaningful role in assisting the projects and students as they move onward. Purves concluded her presentation with an audio inter-view and conversation she had with Keegan, a senior student, who had chosen an adventure in welding as a choice for gaining additional credits within the apprenticeship program.

The presenters allowed board members to ask a host of questions concerning the overall programming plus indi-vidual thoughts on the projects offered to date.

Black cloud hovers over start of NHL season

Bruce Penton

It's going to be a sad beginning to the 2024-25 National Hockey League season as the Aug. 29 death of all-star winger Johnny Gaudreau is going to overshadow the tra-ditional start-of-season thrills. The 31-year-old Gaudreau, who racked up 743 points in 11 seasons and was one of the most popular players in the league because of his diminutive stature, electric skat-ing and det mourse was killed when mound down by

Oct. 15 against Florida Panthers, it will be a solemn occa-sion. Tributes will be made; a video presentation of Gaud-reau's life and hockey career will be shown. Tears will flow. Such a tragic ending to a life with so much promise. The sentiment won't get any more pleasant on Nov. 29 and Dec. 3 when the Blue Jackets meet the Calgary Flames in a home-and-home series. Gaudreau played the first nine seasons of his career with the Flames, joining Columbus in the summer of 2022 as a free agent. Both cit-ies lay claim to Gaudreau, and for good reason. He had five 20-plus goal seasons with the Flames and was their undisputed team leader. Female assaults RCMP

On August 31, RCMP received a report of a suspicious vehicle following a female on Cowessess First Nations. RCMP attended and located the subject of the complaint who was intoxicated. The female subject was arrested and, in the process, assaulted RCMP. The female was taken to the RCMP Bed and Breakfast and was charged accordingly.

Female causing problems

On August 31, RCMP received a call of an intoxicated female causing problems at a residence on Kahkewist-ahaw First Nations. RMCP attended and placed the intoxicated female under arrest. The female was given a safe place to sober up at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast and was released when she was sober.

Rollover on Ochapowace FN

On September 1, RCMP were called to a rollover on Ochapowace First Nations. RCMP arrived on scene and observed a white Nissan Pathfinder with an injured single male occupant. The adult male who was believed to be under the influence of alcohol was transported to Rein a by STARS for his injuries. RCMP are still investigat-ing this collision and will be obtaining blood to determine if the driver was impaired.

Intoxicated and confused

On September 4, RCMP observed an intoxicated male stumbling in the middle of the street in Broadview, RCMP stopped and tried to speak with the male who turned out to be intoxicated. The male did not know where he lived and was lodged at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast until he was sober and could remember.

Male harassing customers

On September 6, RCMP received a call of a male harass-ing customers and refusing to leave at R&R Gas station on Kahkewistahaw First Nations. RCMP attended and removed the male from the store.

Female sleeping in vehicle

On September 7, Broadview RCMP located a vehicle stopped on the side of a grid road on Ochapowace First Nations. RCMP located a female sleeping in the front seat.

RCMP woke the female up and determined she was paired by alcohol. The female provided samples of her breath and confirmed she was intoxicated. The female spent the day at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast until she was sober.

Old guns at town office

On September 9, RCMP were called to the town of Whitewood admin office. They found two handguns in the basement of the town office and wanted to ensure they were safe. RCMP attended and seized the guns. The handguns are very old and both were prohibited. The town may try to make application to have the guns deemed un-fireable so they can be put in the museum.

Scam of the week—extortion

Scam of the Week—extortion On September 9, RCMP were called to a banking in-stitution in Grenfell where a male was trying to extort a female for money. Due to the bank's fast thinking and phoning the RCMP, the male did not receive any money. This happens more that you think where elderly people are threatened or tricked into giving money to people. I encourage everyone, to have conversations with your lowed ones to ensure they are not tricked into providing winnow. anyone money.

Truck gets hit by train

On September 10, RCMP responded to a truck vs. train collision on Highway 1 near Grenfell. The collision took place when a truck tried to get across the railway before the train. Luckily, the truck driver realized they were not going to beat the train and hit the brakes but they still hit the train with the front of the truck causing extensive damage. The vehicle driver was not injured during the collision collision

Elderly lady driving impaired

On September 10, RCMP were notified of an elderly fe-male driving impaired in the town of Broadview. RCMP stopped the vehicle on Main Street and arrested the fe-male for impaired driving. The female was able to be released to family members after being charged for im-paired driving. paired driving.

Female and child assaulted

Male sprayed with bear mace

Wale sprayed with Decar mace On September 14, RCMP were called to an assault with a weapon. The assault took place when an adult male sprayed another male with bear mace. When RCMP ar-rived, the sprayed male was in a great deal of pain trying to wash his face. RCMP located and arrested the male re-sponsible and lodged him the RCMP Bed and Breakfast. Due to the adult male being on several court-imposed conditions already, the male remained in custody to an-cure for big charge. swer for his charges

Assault in Grenfell

On September 14, an assault and an assault with weapon involving bear mace, and pointing a firearm, was re-ported to RCMP. This took place when a male and female were walking in Grenfell and were approached by three people known to them. They were approached by three people known to them. They were assaulted by the group before leaving the area in a vehicle. The next day the same group showed up at the caller's residence and pointed a rifle at them. They bear-sprayed the group and they took off. This incident is still under investigation.

Driver turns out to be sober

On September 17, RCMP were dispatched to a com-plaint of a black Chevrolet Cruze that was swerving and speeding on Highway 47 near Grenfell. RCMP located the vehicle and the driver performed a roadside alcohol screening which confirmed he was sober. The driver was wreat the composen availed or him and advised that he upset that someone called on him and advised that he was not driving erratically.

Male charged in fatal accident

On September 18, RCMP were called to a serious motor vehicle collision on Highway 1 near Wapella. The collision took place when a GMC Sierra was travelling at a high rate of speed west bound. The GMC then hit the ditch in the meridian and started to roll. The GMC rolled several times between the meridian before coming back out onto the eastbound land of travel on Highway 1 where it was struck by a semi that was travelling west. As a result of the collision, the 22-year-old female passenger of the truck was declared deceased. The 21-year-old male driver of the GMC was arrested and has been charged with impaired driving causing death, dangerous driving causing death, and driving while prohibited. 12 and 13 year old kids spray paint truck and video it

On September 18, RCMP were called to an incident at Grenfell where a group of 12- and 13-year-old kids were arguing with a 12-year-old. The group of kids then spray-painted the truck of the 12-year-old's dad and took a Snapchat video of them doing it. The RCMP is still inves-tigating this but the owner of the truck wants the group of young boys charged and held responsible.

Missing headlights and taillights

On September 18, RCMP stopped a 2010 Chevrolet Sil-verado with missing headlights and taillights. The vehicle driver was determined to be impaired. The male driver spent the night at the RCMP Bed and Breakfast until he was sober and his vehicle was impounded.

Assault during argument On September 19, RCMP were called to an assault on Cowessess First Nations. The assault took place when an argument broke out between a recently divorced couple and the female was pushed and thrown to the ground. No one was hurt in the altercation but the male was charged for assault.

Cows mooooved back to the field

On September 20, the cow gang made a last-ditch effort to start some beef with police before the winter. The cows tried to stop traffic on a grid road on Zagime Anishina-bek First Nations but they quickly moooved along back to their field.

Scam of the week—threats

In this scam you will receive a threatening message from an unknown person and an unknown number that from an unknown person and an unknown number that isn't from around your area. The message will usually say that they are going to kill you or your family unless you send them money. The message might also include a threatening photo. These messages are always generic because the people sending the messages don't actually know you or where you live. The scammers are just hop-ing that you will panic and send them some money be-cause you're scared. If this happens to you, please call the police do not send any money police, do not send any money.

Province, union ink apprenticeship deal MOU to also support future nuclear power jobs

BY RYAN KIEDROWSKI LOCAL JOURNALISM INITIATIVE REPORTER

Recently, the Government of Saskatchewan and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers signed a International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers signed a letter of intent that will increase training in Saskatchewan through union-led apprenticeship. The new apprentice-ship training program is being touted as not only offering the potential of long lasting careers, but also the ability to prepare for new technology coming to the province. "It's more trades training for Saskatchewan people in general, and provides us with the higher training oppor-tunities, better careers as well," Premier Scott Moe said. "But 1 think more significant than that, this agreement of the government of Saskatchewan and IBEW working together is indicative of where we can go in a growing province, a province that is attracting investment from all province, a province that is attracting investment from all over the world in the mining sector." The agreement will lead to a memorandum of understanding between IBEW's local unions throughout the province with the Ministry of Immigration and Career Training to start that training effective 2025. Speaking in Saskatoon on Sept. 19, Moe noted not only Speaking in Saskatoon on Sept. 19, Moe noted not only the importance of the announcement, but the opportuni-ty presented for the province and IBEW to work together. "When you look at some of SaskPower's intents to looking very seriously into the nuclear space, some of the needs that they're going to have and the transmis-sion infrastructure needs that they're going to have in the years ahead—when you look at the investments that are coming in the mining sector, the industrial sector, the commercial sector, just in and around Saskatoon, as well as the residential sector. well as the residential sector, we are going to need more tradespeople in particular, and quite likely more IBEW members in the future," said Moe. Similar apprenticeship programs using the government funded, union-led model are occurring elsewhere in Canada, realizing higher learner completion rates.

"Today's a significant day about realizing we can form a partnership with government and industry," said IBEW Canada International Vice-President Russ Shewchuk. "We have a wealth of experience of trainers across the country that we draw on, staff across the country with an abundant amount of resources that we can tap into and help with our training programs to really advance the folks here in Saskatchewan and give them long-life careers in the electrical industry."

Recent numbers from Statistics Canada show a growing trend in Saskatchewan building permit values, in-creasing 47.5 per cent year-over-year in July 2024. Season-ally adjusted, that translated to a value of $257 million, putting the province second in the percentage of change through all provinces. Last year's GDP in Saskatchewan hit an all-time high of $77.9 billion (up some $1.2 billion, or 1.6 per cent). Saskatchewan ranks second for real GDP growth, over the national average of 1.2 per cent. "Clill to the deal way are the basis of the basis of the area basis."

"Skilled trades. It's a great place to be. It builds such resolve and being a part of something," Shewchuk said. "When you build a project and you live in the communi-ty, that means something. It means something when you can drive by for years to come and show your kids, 'Dad built that project, or 'Mom built that project', and take pride in the community and building us a skill set in the IBEW—whether you're a lineman or electrician, that's a lifelong skill. It's a career.'

The partnership has been in the works since August of 2022 at an initial progress meeting between IBEW and

We're heavily involved with the government in On-tario in training, and we took some of those applications, and said, 'I think they can be transposed and apply in Saskatchewan,' and we've been very, extremely success-control in other province.'' Shewchuk exful in Ontario and in other provinces," Shewchuk ex-plained. "So I think we have a real good recipe here for "We want to see this province grow," he continued

We want to see this province grow, and it starts with pro-grams like this and working in a partnership with a gov-ernment that understands and has a vision for the future, ernment that understands and has a vision for the future," and that leads up to even nuclear power in the future." Shewchuk sees this program as being supplemental to Sask Polytechnic, providing an opportunity for people that may be looking to transition careers. "We believe, looking at the numbers, there are not enough burns in the seats in schools right now that can follow the new defined to the number of the seats of the seats facilitate the need of the province in the next five to 10 years," he said. "We really have to ramp that up."

Moe agreed that the supplemental seating is needed. "The opportunities are endless, but what we see here today is supplemental to the seats that we already have, and it's desperately needed in a province that is leading the nation in investment, attraction and growth," he said.

Setting up workers for new tech

As the province continues to explore alternative ener-gy technologies, Moe stressed the importance of having trained workers ready to begin once the ribbon is cut on new facilities

'As we find our way to the end of the lifespan, for example, of some of our electrical generation facilities, we need to build something new," he said. "And there aren't a lot of options for us as we look ahead and look to satisfy some of the requirements that, for example, a BHP has, or a Nutrien has in the carbon content of the electricity that they have. We're going to run out the life cycle of the assets that we have, because that's the most economical thing to do, and we have people that are operating them that are highly trained."

The electrical grid in Saskatchewan needs work, and some view this partnership as a way to not only improve that need, but keep the jobs local and bolster the econo-

"The electrical grid in Saskatchewan requires a lot of the creating and in sostantic with out to provide power to residents year-round regardless of the climate," IBEW Local 2067 Business Manager Tyler Holmen said. "We have proven that our members can do this job safely and efficiently due to the high standard of training they re-ceive. Now we can ensure that apprentices in the power line construction and maintenance industry will continue that legacy and keep good paying jobs right here in the province.

the province." When the province of the province of the province of the province of the providing a comple-ment to it—Moe spoke on one 'new to Saskatchewan' source that SaskPower is working on. "We want to work in specifically to today's conversa-tion with organizations like IBEW on ensuring that we are training and transitioning those folks for whatever is next," he said. "And in this province, that is very much looking like it's nuclear power. There aren't a lot of other options for us. We're maxed out on our hydropower, bat-tery technology isn't quite there yet, but we have to gen-erate that power in the first place anyway." Much work has already been done regarding small modular reactors in Saskatchewan, with proposed sites modular reactors in Saskatchewan, with proposed sites around Estevan in mind, and a round of local town hall

"We're well down the way when it comes to the small modular reactor conversation in this province, said. "The Saskatchewan Research Council is well down the way on bringing forward micro-reactors and bringing forward that technology in a partnership with Westing-house—again, a Saskatchewan owned company—and I think we're prepared at some point not to commit to but to enter into the discussion around 'is Saskatchewan poised for some of the large scale reactors' as well into the future to satisfy the electricity demands that we have and will have with increased investment. "All of that, I think, comes together and is dependent on agreements just like this, so that we have the qualified folks at IBEW and others to satisfy the needs."

OBITUARIES

Ross John Strong MARCH 20, 1947

SEPTEMBER 14, 2024 The family of Ross John Strong is saddened to an-nounce his passing on Sep-tember 14, 2024, at the age of 77 years. In true Ross fashion, he managed to get rashion, he managed to get his way and remained in his home where he passed peacefully surrounded by his loving wife of 55 years and all three of his adult children children.

The youngest of three siblings, Ross was born to Olive and Clark Strong on March 20, 1947, in Es-terhazy, Saskatchewan terhazy, Saskatchewan. When others called him an "afterthought" since he was 14 years younger than his siblings, Ross's parents countered, "He kept us oung.'

Ross attended Prosperthen Rocanville School, where he met the love of his life, Helen White. They married on August 16, 1969. Their first married home was in Regina where Helen worked on her Bachelor of Education and Ross worked at Dominion Bridge.

Ross and Helen moved back to their hometown of Rocanville, Saskatch-ewan, in 1971 where Ross returned to work as a steel fabricator for Kenny Goodman at Goodman Steel and Iron Works. Ross would work for Goodman's until he retired in 2010. During his career, his Murray was at peace knowing that his passing was near and felt ready to continue his journey on the other side.

He is survived by his wife Deane Lewis; son Darin (Bonnie) Lewis and daughter Leanne (John) Williams; grandsons Zack (Shelby) Lewis and Carter Williams; granddaughters Jesse (Nic) Pferdmenges, Emily Williams (Jordan) and Ni-cole Williams (Landon); great-grandchildren Haze Lewis, Tuff Lewis, Ben Pferdmenges and Henri Pferdmenges. He is also survived by in including the diamond monument (for Rocan-ville's diamond anniversary), and the world's largest oilcan, will outlive us all.

Ross was always very involved and vocally sup-httored and vocarly sup-portive in his community. He served on the Rocan-ville Rink Building Com-mittee (1995-2001), served as an alderman on Rocan-(REDO), worked on building improvements for the new pharmacy, and was a strong supporter of the Thrift Store since it opened in 1996.

Ross and Helen raised Koss and Helen raised three children in Rocan-ville, and he was very proud that they all went on to graduate from uni-versity before eventually having families of their own. Ross had difficulty sitting idle and used much of his retirement to travel to his children's homes when something required fix-ing or when home projects were scheduled. In 2009, Ross and Helen made the difficult deci-sion to move to White City to be closer to the care home where Helen's parents lived. One of the drawbacks of the decision was that Muriel Pateman would no longer be liv-ing across the street. Muriel and her late husband Hartley had helped raise all three Strong children and had become family.

After his wife's parents passed, Ross expressed that he'd had enough of the Saskatchewan win-ters, and the decision was made to move to Kelowna, B.C. It was again difficult to leave their new friends and community, but with the promise of staying in touch with their White City neighbors, they even-tually moved to Kelowna in 2014 in 2014. Now with a large home situated between all three children, Ross enjoyed hosting the family often on long weekends and holidays. He was grateful for all the new friendships formed in Kelowna as well as the many Saskatchewan visitors who made the journey out to B.C.

In 2019, Ross was diag-nosed with Alzheimer's Disease. Although he struggled with memory loss, had difficulty finding the right words, and could no longer "fix everything" nor complete projects as planned, he remained the kind, generous, grateful spirit that his family and friends knew and loved.
