A healthy smile speaks volumes

For a gleaming smile visit an oral health specialist

Why is so much emphasis placed on tooth brushing? Because oral health is directly linked to our general health and well-being. It is also a well known fact that dental disease can take a heavy toll, both financially and socially; treatments can be very costly, bad breath can put off our friends, and toothaches can cause absenteeism from work or school.

Dental health involves all aspects of the health and functioning of the mouth. In addition to allowing us to talk and eat, our mouths must also fight against infections that cause tooth decay, inflammation of the gums, tooth loss, and bad breath.

So how can you ensure good oral health for you and your family? The first step is to make sure that very young children do not get into the habit of having a bottle of milk, fruit juice, or a sweet drink before going to bed. These sugary drinks stay coated on the teeth for long periods of time and can lead to tooth decay.

Brush your teeth at least twice a day with fluoride toothpaste. You should also visit your dentist about every six months for a check-up.

Oral health professionals have an important part to play in maintaining dental health as well as treating and preventing associated problems.

So, take care of your teeth and dazzle the world with your beautiful smile!

Maintaining healthy teeth and gums means working closely with your dentist. Regular dental check-ups allow this specialist to detect any problems and take the necessary preventive measures to keep them under control.

During a check-up, let your dentist know about any change in the general state of your health. For example, your dental health might be affected if you're pregnant, if you've started taking medications since your last visit, or if you suffer from allergies. Your dentist watches out for signs and symptoms of gum disease, cavities, infections, the wearing down of tooth enamel due to teeth grinding, and any other problem that could be harmful to your health.

A thorough cleaning takes up a major part of a visit to the dentist, but it's worth every second of your time. Indeed, professional cleaning is vital in the prevention of gum disease, one of the most common problems in adults. Some stains can also be removed during this procedure and the appearance of your teeth improved. During the examination it's possible that fluoride in the form of a gel or foam will be applied to your teeth in order to help prevent tooth decay.

Many modern dental clinics are equipped for tooth restoration and replacement. If you're missing one or several teeth, your dentist will offer advice on the best way for you to prevent long term jawbone deterioration and the shifting of teeth. He or she might suggest a bridge, prosthesis, implants, or some other long-term plan for care.

Your dentist knows all the different treatments that are available to you and can help you make the right dental care choices. He or she could refer you to a dentist if you need a dental prosthesis, to an orthodontist if you have an anomaly in the positioning or alignment of your teeth or jaw, or to a periodontist if you have a periodontal disease.

Three documents everyone should consider having

Ensuring that your wishes are known and respected, both during your lifetime and following your death, is an important aspect of any plan for the future. While you are alive and well, communicating your wishes and controlling decisions that affect you is fairly straightforward. In the event that you lose your ability to communicate or your capacity to make decisions, things can get more complicated unless you have planned for such an event. And if you should die without properly setting out your wishes for your estate, you will lose all control over how it is handled.

There are three different legal documents that can help ensure that your wishes are known and honoured. It is important for individuals to understand what each document can and can't accomplish.

HEALTH CARE DIRECTIVE

A health care directive lets others know your wishes concerning your health care treatment in the event that you lose your capacity to make or communicate such decisions. Generally speaking, a health care directive provides your doctor or other health care professional with directions about the types of medical treatment or measures that are acceptable to you. A health care directive can cover decisions regarding matters like diagnostic testing, blood transfusions, resuscitation, life support, feeding tubes, antibiotics, surgical procedures and palliative or comfort measures. Health care directives can be completely personalized and need not be limited to the examples listed above. They can also name a proxy that is authorized to make decisions on your behalf and in line with your known wishes. A health care directive cannot authorize euthanasia or assisted suicide.

ENDURING POWER OF ATTORNEY

An enduring power of attorney authorizes another person to act on your behalf and will continue in effect even if you later lose your legal capacity. It can be set up to deal with both your property matters—such as banking, investments, leases or sales—as well as personal affairs, such as where you will live and how your personal care needs will be met. It can also be designed to deal with only property matters or only personal matters.

It is important to note, however, that an enduring personal power of attorney, either on its own or in combination with a property power of attorney, cannot authorize decisions concerning medical treatment—these decisions must be dealt with under a health care directive. An enduring power of attorney only applies during your lifetime and ceases to be effective upon your death.

WILL

A will covers the distribution of your property or estate after you die. Properly drafted and executed, a will can help ensure that your property is divided the way you intended and benefits the people you intended. It can be drafted very broadly (three equal shares to my three children) or contain very specific bequests (to my only brother, David, I leave my entire art collection). A will only comes into effect upon your death and may be changed during your lifetime to reflect changes in your personal life, provided that you continue to be of sound mind.

A will can also be used as part of an overall estate plan to address matters concerning capital gains taxes, transferring farm property or business shares, roll-overs and life interests. It also allows you to name your Executor, the person that will be responsible for seeing your wishes through, and provides an opportunity to record and discuss your wishes about matters such as guardianship of your minor children or funeral arrangements.

As you can see, these three documents deal with three very distinct areas of planning for the future and cannot simply be used interchangeably. Together they can provide a good measure of security that your affairs are in order, regardless of what the future holds. As these documents are legal documents, it is important to understand what is required in order for them to be effective.

Mortgages and more

Buying a home is a huge life event and can sometimes cause a bit of stress. Figuring out where to start can also become a bit overwhelming. To help get you started, we sat down with Megan Nimegeers, a Mobile Mortgage Specialist from Conexus Credit Union to give us her advice on what to know and consider when purchasing your home.

Planning

As it's one of the biggest decisions of your life, planning is essential to ensure you don't get in over your head. Start by asking yourself some important questions:

- What type of home do you want to buy?
- How long do you plan to live in this home? What does your life look like in the next 5-10 years?
- What can you afford? What payment would you be comfortable paying that allows you to still live comfortably?
- How much money do you have saved for a down payment and what will you need?

These are just a few of the questions you need to be asking. Sitting down and talking to a Conexus Mobile Mortgage Specialist will allow you to become focused and help you understand how to get where you want to be.

Pre-approvals and affordability

Once you have an understanding of what you're looking for, it's important to determine how much money you can borrow and the length of the mortgage you'd be interested in. Getting pre-approved sets parameters for the homes you can afford to look at.

When getting approved for a mortgage a number of factors are considered including your income, length of employment, credit history, monthly obligations, assets, liabilities, etc. As well, debt such as credit cards, lines of credit and loans can have a huge impact on how much you're approved for.

* Remember, whatever you are pre-approved for doesn't mean you need to spend the full amount on a home.

Other considerations and things to know

Along with the advice above, here are a few additional things to consider:

- Set money aside for all the additional fees associated with purchasing a home (moving expenses, inspection/lawyer fees, home and life insurance, taxes, etc.). A good recommendation is to set aside 1.5 - 2% of the purchase price to help cover these different costs.
- Filling a space can come with a cost. The great part about planning in advance means you can start setting money aside, asking for birthday gifts and looking for sales on furniture, household items and staple grocery items to fill your cupboards.
- Use www.expressaddress.com to have your mail forwarded to your new address, update your address within existing companies and even set up your utilities for your home. It's free and will help you save time!
- Budget. Budget. Budget. With home ownership comes new expenses, and it's important to have an understanding of your money. Ensure to budget for some of those unexpected expenses such as maintenance or breakdowns.

Buying a home can be stressful but with a bit of planning, and working with an expert, your transition into home ownership can run smoothly. Remember, you're not in it alone. A Conexus Mobile Mortgage Specialist is there to help.

Conexus offers the following solutions, making it easier for you to obtain a mortgage to buy your dream home!

- Down payment assistance
- New to Canada international credit reports accepted
- New to Canada, 5% down payment option available

A tribute to our local Education Professionals

Southeast College's professionals excel in assisting adult learners

Southeast College has a number of professional staff who are trained specifically to work with adult learners and assist them in their educational needs.

"All of our staff are trained to help our students," says Sheena Onrait with Southeast College. "We have a wide variety of staff members that assist our students on a regular basis—from our administrative support staff that help our students on day-to-day things, our campus managers who help with more detailed student support, and then of course our student advisors that really dive in to help our students with their academic success. They also assist students that need help with financial support, like whether or not they qualify for a student loan and in general a wide range of supports."

Onrait says the student advisors at Southeast College play a number of roles.

"When it comes to our current students they are there to offer general support to students throughout their entire experience with us," she says. "Whether it is help with academic support, like helping them find a tutor, or an ear to lend if they are having a tough day, or whether it is help with their student loan or help with their post secondary application, they offer those types of supports to our students on an ongoing basis."

"When it comes to a prospective student, if someone were to walk in and say 'you know I am really interested in a certain career and I don't know where to find information,' our student advisors really help those students. They can do a skills inventory with them. They can help guide them in the right direction if they are looking for a specific post-secondary program."

Onrait says all of the professionals at the college interact with the students in different capacities.

"The instructors are an integral part of our organization, of course, because they are providing that level of education to our students. For the most part, they would have the most communication with students. Second would be the student advisors. Depending on the student, of course, some students would go the whole year and not see their student advisor where some students would see their student advisor quite often. It just depends on the student and what their level of need is."

These professionals are on hand at all of the Southeast College campus locations.

"At pretty much all of our locations we have instructors," says Onrait, "and our student advisors are throughout our region. We have six student advisors currently and they are all responsible for a certain area, section or program, so we have every single one of our programs covered by a student advisor."

One thing that distinguishes Southeast College's professionals, says Onrait, is that they are used to working specifically with adult learners.

"They are trained to work with adult learners. There is a difference between a high school learner and an adult learner," she says. "They are all well versed and educated and have a long standing history with adult learners."

"That is what sets our advisors apart—they recognize the challenges that adult learners face and they have the resources to help learners with those challenges."

Clever ways to boost your home's curb appeal

When selling your home, nothing looks quite as good as a well-manicured front garden or beautifully decorated balcony. While many homeowners focus on the interiors of their homes, a property's exterior can make all the difference, adding to its appeal and boosting its resale value.

And, a home's exterior plays an important role in shaping a prospective purchaser's decisions. As a first impression, these areas help set the tone and encourage buyers to visualize themselves owning the home.

An attractive exterior doesn't have to break the bank. There are a number of ways you can create a stunning outside environment without much effort or money. Here are just a few tips to carry you through the selling season:

Clear the clutter. One of the easiest ways to make any outdoor space come to life is to keep it clean and tidy. This lets buyers visualize how they will make the space their own when it trades hands.

Easy container gardens. Planted containers can add a charming look and feel to entranceways and balconies. When picking pots, look for similar styles that vary in size for a nuanced appeal.

Drought-tolerant plants. Flowerbeds and plants are often a great way to add a splash of colour to any exterior. For maximum effect, choose an assortment of perennials and annuals that require less water and are able to withstand hot summer days.

Don't forget to fertilize. Though sunlight and water are usually enough, periodically feeding your plants essential nutrients will promote lavish growth and ensure consistent flowering.

Grain farmers shouldn't shy away from benchmarking

PETER MANNESS, MNP

Whenever I bring up benchmarking with grain farm clients, I generally get two reactions. The first is from a group of producers that immediately buy into the idea and want to know how they compare to other farms. The other group either think they are already equal to their neighbors or they don't want to find out.

Most farmers will spend all day and night talking, reading, and even tweeting about farming to anyone and everyone but they are also fiercely independent business people and don't like to talk about the financial health of their business. The usefulness of a benchmark is not as much a ranking tool as it is a method to help evaluate and direct business decisions. I like to break down into three main areas: Profit, Trend and Focus.

1. Profit: I don't like to say it's all about the money, but in business it is generally a good place to start. Whenever I look at a financial statement, I always start at the bottom of the income statement with the profit line.

A benchmark can take out the markets, weather and size and show the impact of effort and management on a per unit basis (per acre for grain farms). Are we generating a reasonable profit for the size of our operation on a per unit basis. If not, why? And secondly, does it matter?

The only two things we must give are time and money. If our efforts do not generate a return, then over the long run, are we making good use of our time? It is okay to give up some profits to devote your time elsewhere, but how can we make an informed decision if we don't know what we are giving up?

There is often a concern among producers that one region is way more profitable than other regions and farms can't be compared across broad geographical areas. In our Manitoba region, our most recent grain benchmark numbers showed that the top 15 producers were spread over 10 crop insurance risk areas, indicating to me strong management is just as, if not more valuable than good land.

2. Trend: What trend you are on is just as important as where you are. This is one of the greatest benefits of using benchmark data versus historical averages or targets.

In Western Canada, producers have maintained profits by not only expanding acres but by continually pushing yields higher. The current trend is adding 1 bu per acre per year in wheat yield and over 1/2 bu per acre in Canola. We obviously know that costs are rising along with the increase in yield. If we understand how our trend compares to the benchmark trend, it helps us to see if we are keeping up on a revenue basis and managing our costs.

A five-year historical average on machinery costs is useful but you can't buy a new combine for the same price as in 2013. This needs to be taken into consideration.

Trend also gives us hope if some costs are out of line. If we can hold them in the short term, it may bring us back into line with the benchmark over time.

3. Focus: Focus is the final piece after you understand how you compare from a profit standpoint and the trend you are on. A farm financial statement is full of numbers and it is easy to get caught up focusing on something that isn't important. If you aren't hitting the profit target, then you can go back to see where the problem might be.

Are we short on revenue? Do we spend too much on inputs versus what we get in return? Is it costing us too much in operating costs or overhead?

It might not lead to an easy solution, but at minimum it will give you more certainty in how you deploy your management skills. If you are one of the most profitable producers, does it change your perspective on how you approach growth?

Farmers are all trying to play the same game but ultimately no two farms or farmers are exactly alike. By utilizing benchmark information, you can see what things make your farm successful, how you can continue to achieve that in the future and what areas to focus on to make it happen.

'Ag'vocates and the many faces of agriculture

WENDY SCHATZ LEEDS,

LEAD AGRONOMIST,
SHARPE'S SOIL SERVICES LTD
Agricultural professionals work in a wide variety of areas both within and outside the field of agriculture. You will find us in research and development, marketing and market development, primary production, consulting and business management, food processing, education, public relations and advertising, transportation, the financial industry, quality assurance, aquaculture, natural resource development, information technology, advocacy, and environmental management.

Agricultural professionals wear many hats in the field of agriculture, yet the one thing we all share is passion for the field of agriculture. There is a term for this, it's called being an "Agvocate." An Agvocate is someone that believes in the process and science of agriculture and is dedicated to promoting it in a positive manner while also correcting misguided perceptions about agriculture. Agriculture is a modern and dynamic industry with value that needs to be better understood, recognized and advanced among industry stakeholders and the general public. Locally you can find us assisting producers through all stages of the crop production year. Ag professionals provide recommendations for the efficient and sustainable use of resources and conservation practices to produce high yielding crops and livestock feed sources. We assist in marketing and farm management to help maximize the profitability of our producers' farms. We are individuals that understand the agriculture sector and promote sustainable production to help feed the world!

Every day you are impacted by agricultural professionals! Canada's agriculture and agri-food industry provides one in eight jobs to Canadians. From the bread you eat, to the milk you drink, from the ethanol-based gas in your car to the grains used to feed livestock, from the omega 3 supplements you take to the zero trans fat foods you eat. Many commercial goods are manufactured from ag byproducts and even the floors you walk on have been produced with the assistance of agricultural professionals. The opportunities within agriculture are endless and dynamic and I am proud to be an Agvocate!
